

Dusit Thani College

Recommended Accommodation Guide

This guide provides a summary of the different types of student accommodation in Bangkok, especially around the DTC campus. If you are arriving from overseas it is worthwhile to book a hotel for the first few days as a base while you look for something more permanent.

As a general rule, hotels, on a long-term basis, will be expensive and you may want to seek accommodation in a house share/hall of residence as a cheaper alternative.

2. LONG TERM ACCOMMODATION

There are several different types of accommodation available, which student may prefer staying alone or sharing with friends. When living in Bangkok, it is important to remember that the nearer you are to the college, the better commuting will be and no traffic to worry.

Please note that the duration of property leases vary, including:

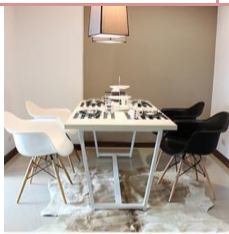

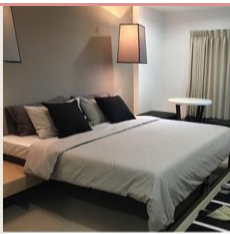

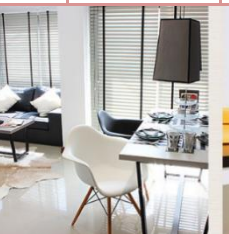

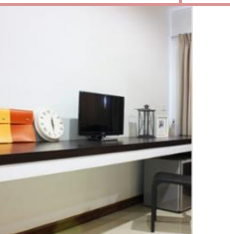

- short term (less than 6 months)
- six-monthly
- long term (minimum 12 months)

Rental rates will vary accordingly, with longer-term rates being the least expensive. It is advisable to check with each accommodation on lease conditions in advance.
